Q: Matlab: Properties of mixed array types i'm having some problem with matlab. I need to define a piece of code that will make the following: If the user inputs a matrix [4x4] and the matrix's elements are all strings then print the following statement %for i = 1:4 i1 = 1; %f1 = [1,2,3,4]; f1 = [1,2,3,4]; %for j = 1:4 i2 = 1; f2 = [5,6,7,8]; f3 = [9,10,11,12]; f4 = [13,14,15,16]; %end strcopy(f1,i1,f2,i2,f3,f4); Since the user types the numbers 1..4 and 4 strings inside the matrix [4x4] i have chosen for strcopy to copy the first number to the first string, the second number to the second string and so on. My problem is that i'm not able to check if the matrix [4x4] contains strings or numbers. The error i get is : ??? undefined function'strcopy' for input arguments of type 'double' Any suggestion? Thank you

A: Assuming a string is any sequence of characters starting and ending with a comma, the easiest way would be to use ismember with the "", " strings to test if the vector is comprised of strings only [~,ind] = ismember(myvector, {'', ''}), 'rows') %// All vectors must be composed of strings

Bruins Meet Bruins: Vintage Bruins vs. 2011-12 Bruins Marc Savard and Brad Marchand don't have to worry about how each will start in the NHL, as they are both on the same side of the ice, pecking away at their linemates to bring their second-period goals across the goal line. But they're not the only Bruins who are busy, and Saturday night's tilt against the St. Louis Blues will be a treat for fans to see the contrast in styles between this year's version of the Bruins and the strong-skating and well-conditioned squad that is expected to take the ice against them. "It's a little weird," Savard said of the two Bruins taking on each other so early on Saturday. "You're sort of looking in from the outside, but obviously you're a big part of the group, so when guys are going through the group you know what they're saying. Obviously you see them on TV a lot more, and you know a little bit more about what they're saying. It's a little different when you're on the ice with them." The Bruins have a history of playing against each other this time of year, as Marchand, Patrice Bergeron, Matt Hunwick, and Nathan Horton will face Tyler Seguin, Paul Stastny, Chris Stewart, and Jamie McGinn, respectively. "I think it's going to be a great game," said Marchand. "You know, we have a few familiar faces in there. Both teams are still playing fairly well, so it's going to be good
