Q: How to return a single item from a foreach loop in PowerShell? I'm trying to iterate through a list and return a single item to the calling process. $queryReserve = "SELECT * FROM dbo.Reserve" $conn = New-Object -typename System.Data.OleDb.OleDbConnection -typename System.Data.OleDb.OleDbDataAdapter $conn.ConnectionString = "Server = $server; Database = $db; User Id=$user; Password=$pwd" $conn.Open() $commandReserve = New-Object -typename System.Data.OleDb.OleDbCommand $queryReserve $commandReserve.Connection = $conn $reader = New-Object -typename System.Data.OleDb.OleDbDataReader $commandReserve.ExecuteReader() while ($reader.Read()) { $line = $reader.GetValue(0).ToString() $line = $line.Substring(0, $line.IndexOf("[")).Replace("]","") return $line } The while loop works fine. I'm new to powershell and am having a very difficult time with the return statement. What I want to do is return a single item, the first index of the first record in the table. I'm hoping I can assign $line to the actual column, but I'm not sure how to accomplish that. If I could get the script to run without a return statement then my next step would be to get the first record of the table. EDIT: It looks like it could be as easy as just $line = $reader.GetValue(0) A: Return a single item will not work in your case as all the result will be there, so you will have to use Select-Object cmdlet. If you want to get the first record in a database table, you must do that query only once as you have already done it: $queryReserve = "SELECT * FROM dbo.Reserve" $conn = New-Object -typename System.Data.OleDb.OleDbConnection -typename System.Data.OleDb
