How to download I. HONG KONG (Reuters) - More than 500 million people around the world could die from the novel coronavirus in the coming weeks unless governments make it easier for companies to test and produce vaccines, a research paper showed on Wednesday. A few days ago, many experts and analysts had said the virus was mostly a problem for the United States, and that the outbreak there would not spread worldwide. But the virus is spreading rapidly in Iran and has now reached Hong Kong, and it is moving toward Europe and Africa. More than 31,000 people have been infected and more than 900 have died so far. The toll could get much higher, the paper by Imperial College London's Maria Jesus Meirelles and colleagues at the University of California, Berkeley and the Chinese University of Hong Kong, showed. "The biggest threat that the world is facing is the threat of Covid-19 becoming a pandemic," said Dr Michael Worobey, a University of Toronto virologist who has reviewed the paper
