Converting integer values into separate values of a single sequence For example, # These are the same integers a = 1 b = 2 c = 3 # Integer_lst takes an integer value and returns a list int_lst = [1, 2, 3] # Integer_max takes an integer value and returns the maximum of the integers int_max = 3 # max takes a list of integers and returns the maximum of those integers max([1, 2, 3]) # 3 I want to write a function which takes an integer and returns a list of corresponding values, instead of a list of integers. For example: # And it returns: [1, 2, 3] P.S. I want to avoid using Integer_lst. A: It turns out you can just do this (note the use of xrange instead of range): def ints(int_value): return [int(i) for i in str(int_value).split("")] And it works exactly the same as the other answers. A: `def to_list(`
