the new interface is designed to be user-friendly and the samples can be accessed very quickly so they can be played without having to load the pattern. all the samples in the cello library are grouped in cello extensions which you can open separately. in addition to these new samples, the library contains the same samples as the former solo strings with the exception of some basic drums such as bass drums and congas. the library contains more than 40 different drum kits, such as drum loops, drum samples, drum samples and drum samples. each drum sample is grouped according to gender, type of drum and which region of the world it comes from (be it the african region, the middle east, the arabic region, russia, eastern europe or western europe). the drum samples are made using a real percussion instrument, whether it's a real tom, a real snare or any other kind of drum. we recorded them through a real drum kit and processed them with a real drum sound engine. besides those samples, we added 24 free loops at the tempo of 130 bpm. these loops were recorded by looping e.g. recordings of classical piano, guitar, electric guitars and everything in between. the loops are divided into soft and harder loops (including varying degrees of motion). every element of the environment can be recorded and even the human voice can be recorded with a microphone. you can use these loops whenever you want and to mix them with the samples. you can edit the samples according to your music and add effects such as distortions, equalizers, cross-fades, delays and reverbs. if you want to bring out the individual tones of the instruments, you can use high and low cut filters. you can use the high cut filter to bring out the bass sounds, the low cut filter to bring out the treble sounds.
