Credit:AP Pistorius was recently released from hospital after undergoing surgery to his right foot, ankle and knee for a condition known as compartment syndrome. By the time Pistorius arrives in court, his legal team will have presented their theory of the case. It will cover just over 60 pages. A spokesperson for the family said they have been in close contact with the State. They will cover key aspects of the case and will answer to the prosecution, defence, judge and jury. They are designed to appeal to the judge, who will decide whether the accused is fit to appear in court. Mr Patel said the family did not want to say anything to the media. The case will be adjourned from Monday until January 13, when the prosecution and defence say their opening statements. The state has already been allocated 180,000 words in the media, which it may use at the appropriate time. Mr Patel is understood to be authoring the defence statement, which will cover over 60,000 words and will be 40 pages long. The prosecution is likely to be considerably shorter. Oscar Pistorius will return to court on Tuesday for a second pre-trial hearing. Credit:AP It will go through his initial police interviews and his hospital admission, and will cover charges of culpable homicide and murder. It
